- The song tells you that you've got to learn to look for the real you. Why is it important to know who you are and how can you find the "real you"?
- The song says, "Sorry squirt you can't find my worth, From a label on my shoes label on my shirt." What do you think this means? Have you ever felt labeled by things like what you wear? Have you ever been given an unfair label? How did that make you feel?
- The song says, "Labels? They're just fables." In what way do you think labels are like fables?
- In the song there is a line that says, "So they're always going to cast stones even thought they know they live in glass homes." What do you think is meant by this?
